Grand Banquet.

Last Wednesday night a little before ten o'clock, the members of the Masonic fraternity to the number of thirty-four, and their wives and lady friends which swelled the number to sixty-one, assembled at the Wright House, to enjoy a grand spread, which had been prepared by Mr. Wright and his esteemed better half. It was a little after ten o'clock when the assault was made upon the tastefully arranged dining hall, where the tables fairly groaned under their load of all the delicacies of the season, which was served in the most appitizing manner. Here for a time business was carried on as though life fairly depended upon how much of the good things could be stowed away during their stay in the hall, while the time was enlivened by the cracking of jokes mingled with merry peals of laughter.

When the appetites of all present had been satisfied, Brother Eckels called the happy company to order, and in a few well chosen words explained to those present why he had partaken of such a hearty supper. The speaker then called the Rev. J. H. McCandless to stand up, while he presented him with a past Masters' jewel, for the efficient manner in which he had governed the lodge during the past year. This was totally unexpected by the Rev. gentleman, and for a moment he was completely nonplussed. He soon rallied, and in a very fitting manner, accepted the time honored token from his brethren. Mr. Shook was very much exercised over not being permitted to make a speech, and we respectfully request Mr. Eckels not to let it occur again.

All who were present wish to tender their heartiest thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Wright and daughter for a most enjoyable evening.

A young man in Lowell. Mass., troubled for years with a constant succession of boils on his neck, was completely cured by taking only three bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Another result of the treatment was greatly improved digestion with increased avoirdupois.

A Fine Concert.

The first concert given by the Smethport Choral Union took place at the opera house last Tuesday evening. The inclement weather prevented many from being present who would have otherwise been there. The chorus was arranged in ampitheatre style, giving the audience a full view of all the singers, and they presented a very attractive appearance. The entrance of Director Wilson was greeted with a hearty applause.

The first number on the program was "They That Sow in Tears," from Gaul's "Holy City," and was rendered in a commendable manner. This was followed with a solo by Mr. H. Cumberland Wilson, "Sound an Alarm," from Handel's "Judas Maccabeus," and was sung in a manner that did justice to Mr. Wilson's reputation as a soloist, the audience rendering well merited applause. "God is a Spirit" was well rendered by a quartette consisting of Mrs. Reilly, Miss Lena Wright Dr. McCoy and Mr. Bouton, and well received. The best rendered number by the chorus, according to the opinion of competent judges, was from Haydn's "Creation"—"The Heavens are Telling" The Nunundah Male Quartette, comprising Messrs. Wilson, McCoy, McElroy and Bouton, sang "In Absence," and were accorded hearty applause.

Part 3d opened with Act I, Scene II, from "Sorcerer," Miss Grace McCoy representing "Mrs. Partlett, Miss Alice McCoy, "Constance," (her daughter), and Mr. Wilson, "The Reverend Dr. Daly." All the characters in this scene were well represented, showing considerable dramatic and musical qualities. The entertainment was concluded by the "Anvil Chorus," from "Il Trovatore," with anvil accompaniment. Thus ended an entertainment which clearly proved that under skilled instruction, Smethport has musical talent which very few towns of its size possess Mrs. H. C. Wells, the accompanist, played in her usually artistic manner, notwithstanding the fact that she was compelled, on account of the instrument which the society expected not arriving, to use the old opera house piano. Mr. Wilson's untiring efforts to make this first concert of the Union a creditable one have certainly been rewarded, and we hope to hear more from this fine musical organization in the near future.

Teachers Attention!

When in the history of the teachers' association of McKean county has such a corps of instructors been advertised as are announced for the meeting at Port Allegany next week? Have we ever had as strong a list of prominent educators at any of our regular county institutes? On the program we note the names of such eminent educators as Albro, Murphy, Benedict, Holden, Wood, Mundt, Eckles, Stauffer and others. The press speaks highly of Prof. Murphy. What teacher in the county can afford to miss this rare intellectual treat? Pres. Kelley has been working unceasingly ever since October to make the meeting a success unprecedented in the history of the association and the MINER bespeaks the largest attendance and best meeting ever held in the county. Every teacher should attend.

Fire at Austin.

Last Friday morning unfortunate Austin, the great hemlock lumber centre of Potter county, was again visited by an extensive fire, which was first discovered in the clothing store of Mr. Borowsky on Main street. The fire department quickly responded, but in spite of all their efforts, they were unable to check the flames, and they turned their attention to saving the surrounding property. The fire kept spreading until the Davis hotel succumbed to the flames, including several stores. At this writing we are unable to state the extent of the loss The Autograph states that on Monday the citizens were startled by the third alarm of fire within a week but was soon extinguished.

Pursued by a Demon.

How many suicides, think you, reader, have been committed by persons driven distraught and hunted to their doom by the demon of chronic ill health? Countless. For instance, we know, do we not, that hypochondriasis is a monomania—a sort of minor madness produced by chronic dyspepsia? Again, insomnia, or sleeplessness, often a result of the same cause, culminates in a derangement of the reasoning faculties. It is, therefore, of momentous consequence to prevent the arrival of disease at its chronic phase, when it daily and nightly scourges the sufferer to a dangerously uncertain goal. No medicine known to science, as a means of arresting the maladies to which it is adapted, exists equal to Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Among these complaints are chronic indigestion and insomnia, kidney and rheumatic ailments, constipation and liver trouble. Appetite is improved by the Bitters, the blood fertilized, and bodily substance and vigor increased by it.

DUN'S REPORT.

The wonderful success of the popular loan alters the face of events. January operations become ancient history, as the nation mounts above all doubts and fears to a solid certainly that the people can and will uphold their government. The Morgan syndicate, bidding over $6,000,000 more than it would have paid at the rate of a year ago, gets only about half of the issue, and a considerable part at higher figures, possibly almost half goes to the multitude of individual investors represented by banks throughout the country. Had the Morgan syndicate made no bid, the Stewart syndicate would have taken the balance at a price nearly as good. With $568,000,000 bid by 4,600 banks or persons, the tremendous strength of the national credit is demonstrated as it has not been before for many years. The influence of this event upon all manufacturing and all trade cannot be lightly estimated. It strips the silver agitation of all its power to hurt. It puts the Treasury on a safe basis for the time, whether Congress does anything useful or not. It notifies foreign nations that the United States have power as well as purpose. It unlocks millions of gold which have been gathered in preparation, brings directly several millions of gold from Europe, and stimulates the anxiety of foriegn investors to obtain American securities.

THE young Republicans of Bradford have taken the proper course in organizing Republican clubs. The MINER for over two years has been urging this important step. While the Republican party is gaining political victories on every hand recruits are eager to join. Many a young man who has had a leaning towards Democracy feels at the present time considerable doubt about the honesty and stability of the Democratic party, and with a little urging would join the party that is in the ascendancy. Every city, town and hamlet should do their utmost to organize young Republican clubs. Let some young man make the first move; all it needs is a start. The city of Bradford has set the example. Let others join in the good work. There should at least be 45 good active working clubs in this county. Who will start the ball rolling?

CONGRESSMAN TALBERT, of South Carolina, in a speech the other night, championed secession, and was called upon to explain his language, which he did by saying that he believed secession would be right under the same circumstances which existed in 1861. A resolution of censure was offered by Mr. Barrett, of Mass, and referred to the judiciary committee. And still some people say the late unpleasantness is entirely forgotten.

EX PRESIDENT HARRISON has shown extremly good sense in refusing to become a candidate for the presidency. He will assume much pleasanter duties in striving to rule a woman, but with all his statesmanship he will find that the woman will attach a silken halter around his neck and lead him at her will and the warrior and statesman will become a docile captive in the net of hyman.

IT is really too bad that Sam Josephs, of Philadelphia, will not be around to see Uncle Sam figure up the the price of the clover purchase that he made in 1892. "The four years more of Grover" will be one of the most expensive luxuries that the people of this country ever indulged in, but Democratic ideas always did come high.

THE "Pine Tree" statesmen have evidently got pitch on their hands, as will be seen by the tenacity with which they cling to any political situation that comes their way; but who cares as long as they are such able men.

Professor In a Deaf Mute Institution Is Stricken Down In His Studio.

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—What appears to have been a coldblooded murder was committed in the institution for the improved instruction of deaf mutes. The victim was Professor Max Eglan, 60 years old, an instructor in drawing at the institution. The body was found in the professor's studio on the fourth floor. There were several gashes on the back of the head, and near the body was found a bloody iron shovel, with which the murderer evidently struck down his aged victim.

No apparent motive for the crime was discovered. When the professor's clothing was searched his gold watch and chain were found intact, 60 cents in change, a bunch of keys, a pipe and a matchbox were also found in his pockets

It was said by Superintendent Green of the institution that he did not know that the professor had an enemy in the building, and for that matter, in the world. He said that he was a man who kept well to himself, and after his business had been transacted at the institution he left and had but few words with anybody. He said that the professor had been with the institution for a number of years and that his methods and work was everything that was satisfactory.

If the murder was not committed by a person who had free access to the institution the attaches are puzzled to know how any person could gain an entrance to the place without being seen. There are but two entrances to the place and these are in the front of the building The upstairs doors are always kept locked and at the basement door, which is the usual way the building is entered, there is always an attendant and that it would have been impossible for a person to have gained an entrance in that way without having been seen

No one in the building was found who had seen any strange person enter during the afternoon All of the windows to the institution were examined and none were found which would indicate that the murderer had gained an entrance in that manner The entire absence of motive is puzzling to the police and so far as known they have not a single clue on which to begin work

PROCEEDINGS IN ALBANY.

Little of Interest or Importance In Either Branch.

ALBANY, Feb 11.—The Cuban question was not discussed by Mr Butts of New York in the assembly, as the resolution offered by him last week urging congress to pass a bill providing for the purchase of Cuba was withdrawn and one outlining a foreign and domestic policy substituted.

Several other resolutions were offered and referred.

Bills passed

Senator Parsons', conferring additional powers upon guaranty companies in counties containing 100,000 inhabitants

Mr Higbie's, ceding jurisdiction to the United States over lands in the town of Southfield, Richmond county, to be occupied as sites for fortifications and coast defenses.

Adjourned.

In the Senate.

It was the general impression that one of three "coal trust" resolutions would be brought up in the senate It was found, however, that only Senator Cantor's had been printed and inasmuch as he was absent the matter was held in abeyance.

Bills passed.

Senator Page's, allowing the police to take bail for the violation of a municipal ordinance

Assemblyman Hill's, authorizing the payment of the Buffalo police semi-monthly

A concurrent resolution by Senator Grady that when the legislature adjourns on Tuesday it be until Thursday, in honor of Lincoln's birthday, which occurs on Wednesday, went over.

Adjourned.

MR. MORTON'S BOOM.

Republican New Yorkers In the House Have Launched It.

WASHINGTON, Feb 11.—The Republican members of the New York delegation in the house are preparing to launch the Morton boom at the national capital.

The first move was made yesterday, when a document relating to the public services and party claims of New York's Governor was circulated among the New York members by Representative Odell The head of the delegation, Representative Payne, was accorded the post of honor as the first signer. Signatures were rapidly secured, and it was stated that all the Republican members of the New York delegation who were in town had signed

The document pledges the members to the earnest support of Governor Morton and refers to the resolution adopted by the Republican state convention at Saratoga last september, in which the delegates of the New York Republicans unanimously adopted the governor's candidacy.

Boxing Bouts at Boston.

BOSTON, Feb 11.—Eddie Connolly of St John, N. B., defeated Morris Hagerstrom of Newark, N J, in one minute and four seconds Patsey Haley of Buffalo defeated Patsy Broderick of Providence in 12 rounds.

AMERICANS PERSECUTED.

Turks Endeavor to Implicate Them With Armenian Rioters.

LONDON, Feb 11.—The Constantinople correspondent of The Daily News telegraphs to that paper:

"Turkey's plan to implicate the American missionaries in Armenian affairs is being steadily pursued. An attempt has been made to arrest Mr Knapp, one of the hardest working missionaries at Bitlis, on a charge of sedition and murder, based on an accusation signed under coercion by some Armenians who were in jail

"Mr Knapp appealed to United States Minister Terrell who learned from Consul Hampson at Moush that the charge was wholly unfounded and was a mere pretext to drive Mr. Knapp from the country.

"Mr Terrell insists that, unless the charge is abandoned, Mr. Knapp shall be brought here and tried before him."

Deadly Result of a Fight.

ATCHISON, Kan., Feb. 11.—W. I. Burdett is dead, and his son, W. I. Burdett, is dying at Sugar Lake, southeast of here. in Missouri, the result of a Sunday fight. George and Charley Way, brothers, engaged in a fight with the Burdetts and after a desperate tussel worsted them. The elder Burdett was killed almost instantly, while his son received wounds from which he cannot recover. The Way brothers are in jail.

I was talking to a hotel clerk, and he said: "Talk about kleptomaniacs at dry goods stores, they are scarcely a circumstance to those at a first class hotel. People who cheerfully pay $5 a day for board will steal a 10 cent cake of soap and put themselves to a great deal of trouble to do it. But the principal things guests take are towels, and the collection of those articles has become a regular fad. They are taken as souvenirs of the hotel, and a lady who has traveled a great deal will have a whole trunkful with the names of the hotels on them. This is conclusive proof that they have stopped at those houses, and a person whose towels bear the marks of hotels throughout the civilized world is to be envied as possessing a most interesting collection of mementos. A few napkins are taken and occasionally spoons. Door keys and checks used to disappear in great numbers, but none of these equals towels in the eyes of collectors of hotel souvenirs."

It Could Now Be Pulled Off at Any Time.

FITZ'S LION ON THE RAMPAGE.

Broke His Collar, Stampeded the Natives and Slew a Goat—Assurances Given That the Fight Will Not Take Place on Texas Soil.

EL PASO, Tex., Feb. 11.—Dan Stuart and representatives of the pugilists to take part in the big fight held a meeting in Stuart's office to arrange further details of the fight. Julian wanted an agreement that the official timekeeper should call off seconds in the event of a knockdown. Maher's representative objected and the matter was finally dropped. It was agreed, however, that the timekeeper should blow a whistle as "get ready" signals five seconds before the time for each round.

Captain McDonald with half a dozen rangers arrived from Amarallo and joined the dozen that arrived Sunday under General Mabry. Others are expected today. United States District Attorney Culberson, brother of the governor, arrived also. He declared his visit at this time had nothing to do with the fights; that he was on other business and was paying no attention to the pugilists. The rangers are here to see that Texas laws are not broken. If New Mexico is invaded the officers there are competent to act.

Fitzsimmons rode in from Juarez on a bicycle to get a new collar for the lion. The animal broke his collar and destroyed a goat. The Mexicans at first fled in all directions. When the goat was attacked the natives threw sticks at the lion. Fitzsimmons went up to his pet with a rope and dragged it from its prey. As a mascot, Fitzsimmons received a horseshoe made by himself at Bay St. Louis.

The kinetoscope people sent their material to the car in which the ring material is placed ready for transportation to the battleground. It is now believed the fight will not take place until the scheduled time, although nearly all the arrangements are completed, and it could be brought off now at any time within a few hours.

William A. Brady has telegraphed that he will be at the ringside to challenge the winner in behalf of Corbett. Sullivan will arrive today. James Lawler, final stakeholder, will arrive from Houston today and final stakes will be posted.

Adjutant General Mabry said that when he said "Texas" in delaring that the fight could not take place in that state, he meant all the disputed territory. This disposes of the New Mexico strip.

General Mabry and Dan Stuart had a long conversation and it is supposed Stuart assured the general there would be no attempt to fight in Texas.

Fitzsimmons nearly upset Enoch Rector, the kinetoscope man, by declaring himself in on the kinetoscope enterprise and saying he wanted $10,000 in advance for his share of the good thing.

In a card published today Bat Masterson says that at least one of the fights arranged will be pulled off successfully, the one between Fitzsimmons and Maher, and that there is an even chance for one or more of the other fights to be held.

Continuing, Masterson says: "That all this commotion has been stirred up because two men are going to box with 5-ounce gloves seems to me to be utterly ridiculous. When the senate and house of representatives of this great country can find nothing better to do than to make laws prohibiting boxing contests in the territories it is high time something was done."

The New Spanish Commander Hailed With Joy.

ALL HAVANA MAKES MERRY.

The Captain General Prepares to Inaugurate a Campaign of Greater Severity Than Was Observed by Campos—Little Known of His Plans.

HAVANA, Feb. 11.—The steamer Alfonso XIII arrived here, having on board General Valeriano Weyler, the new captain general of Cuba; Nicolo, Marquis of Teneriffe; Generals Enrique Barges, Frederico Ochando, Miguel Melquiso, Marinnes Ahumada, Luis Castelloi, Sanchez Bernal and Juan Arolas, the latter being the hero of Jolo, Philippine Islands.

The entire city was brilliantly decorated in honor of the occasion, and the bay was a splendid sight, all the warships and merchant craft present being decorated with bunting. The wharfs were crowded with people at an early hour, and all the steamers and tugboats procurable were loaded with sightseers. The chamber of commerce, the bourse, all the big commercial houses and governments, the Canerian association, General Weyler's countrymen, and others crowded upon the chartered steamers or about the landing place. The troops and volunteers were turned out to a man, together with the fire department and police, and for a long time past no such brilliant display has been witnessed in Havana.

This is mainly due to the fact that in many quarters General Weyler is looked upon as likely to be the man who will restore order in Cuba, which would mean a resumption of commerce and business, developments which are anxiously looked forward to by the commercial community.

Among the high military officers present were Generals Suarez, Valdes, Pando, Marin and Navarro, Admiral Yanas and staff, Colenel Castanedo, Major Moriano and many others.

General Weyler was welcomed by the city council on board the Alfonso XIII. He was presented with an address of welcome and assurances of loyalty.

The captain general came ashore and was received by General Marin and staff. The streets were packed with people who displayed the greatest enthusiasm. In fact, rarely has a distinguished person been received so warmly as was General Weyler when he landed. There is no doubt that considerable real enthusiasm was manifested, in addition to the greetings which would naturally be bestowed upon the representative of Spain.

The balconies in all the streets about the water front and in the vicinity of the palace were full of ladies in holiday attire and they showered flowers upon the new commander as he passed. Besides numerous floral offerings of the most beautiful description, principally in the shape of crowns, were presented to the general, who expressed his thanks in each case in a few brief words.

He seemed to be much pleased with his reception and upon arriving at the palace formally took over the duties of the captain general, taking the oath of fealty over a crucifix and upon a Bible. General Marin administered the oath of office and soon afterwards he received the local military and civil authorities, the different corporations and the bishops and priests.

General Weyler is of light build, about the regular height and has a fine military presence. He is of light complexion and wears side whiskers. He was a lieutenant colonel here during the 10 years rebellion and became noted for his severity. It is said that he will give the insurgents 10 days in which to lay down their arms and that after that time severe measures will be taken with those who do not do so.

General Weyler strikes the observer immediately as being a man of great energy and a thorough soldier.

After the reception of the local military and civil authorities, corporations and clergy was completed, General Weyler appeared upon the balcony of the palace and reviewed the troops. His appearance before the public was the signal for a long outburst of the most enthusiastic cheering, the firing of cannon and the sound of martial music, all the bands in the city being stationed at different points.

Accompanying General Weyler were Captains Colnber and Linares, who are known as military editors. They will most likely have charge of the press censorship here and it is already rumored that there will be considerably more difficulty experienced in this connection by the correspondents in the future. Recently the press regulations have been considerably relaxed and not much difficulty has been experienced in getting average matter upon the cable.

So far as the general situation is concerned, there is not much change. Indeed, no change of importance is expected for some days. General Weyler will first devote himself to a complete review of the operations already undertaken, and he will then figure out the situation as it actually exists. For this purpose, almost immediately after taking the oath of fealty, he caused orders to be sent to all the commanders in the field to draw up with promptness and forward to headquarters here complete returns of the number of men under their command available for active service, the amount of ammunition they have in their possession, the nature and quantity of supplies at their disposal, the number of horses capable of mounting troops, the state of the railroads, telegraphs and public thoroughfares in the vicinity of their commands and the probable location and strength of the enemy in their neighborhoods.

The exact plan of campaign of General Weyler naturally is not known, but it is believed that it will be a very different one from that of Campos. He is likely to call in all the small detachments of troops which have from the first had such a weakening effect upon the Spanish operations, and he will try to drive the insurgents into a position from which they cannot escape without a pitched battle.

General Weyler will also do everything possible to muster as strong a force of cavalry as he can. Considerable reinforcements of this branch of the service have already arrived here and more are expected during the week.

Regarding his political standing, General Weyler will be entirely nonpartisan. His efforts will be directed at once to concentrating his forces and restoring public confidence. Later he will try to engage the insurgents, who are understood to be concentrating their forces in anticipation of having a much more difficult task before them than they have had up to the present.

There's no such thing in this life as complete satisfaction. If a man has no money, he is miserable, and if he has lots of it, it is next to impossible to invest it remuneratively. There is no business which is sure to pay, not even the business of stealing, but that's because there are so many persons in it, and there would be many more in it if the penitentiary did not prevent it from being open to everybody, and so be utterly ruined.—Boston Transcript.

SENATOR BOIS PENROSE.

with honors, and was selected as one of the orators at Commencement, the subject of his oration being "Martin Van Buren as a Politician." After leaving college he studied law in the office of Wayne MacVeagh and George Tucker Bispham, and was admitted to the Bar of Philadelphia in 1883 He was elected in 1884 to represent the Eighth Ward of Philadelphia in the Pennsylvania House of Representatives, as a Republican, succeeding Hon. William C. Bullit, a Democrat. In the session of 1885 he was active in securing the passage of the Act providing a new government for Philadelphia, commonly known as the Bullit Bill. In 1886 Mr. Penrose was elected to represent the Sixth District in the State Senate. This district, embracing the Seventh, Eighth and Ninth wards of Philadelphia, is the richest and most intelligent in Pennsylvania. In the sessions of 1887 and 1887 and 1893 he voted for Matthew Stanley Quay for the United States Senate, and seconded his nomination in the Republican caucus. Among the many subjects of legislation that Mr. Penrose took an active part in, were those relating to the questions of railroad discrimination, revenue and taxation. He was prominent in all the debates on these subjects, as well as in the discussions on the legislation required to carry out the provisions of an Act establishing a new form of local government for Philadelphia.

In the Senate he is a recognized leader, a skillfull debater, a fluent speaker, and one ever powerful in argument. Mr. Penrose has ever been consistent; he never has been appealed to in vain by the people when their interests were in jeopardy; in fact, it can truly be said, his voice and pen have ever been ready to uphold the rights and interests of his fellowmen. He was a candidate for the mayoralty of Philadelphia in 1895, but was politically assassinated at the last moment by the Combine on account of his Anti Corporation record. In Philadelphia he is to-day the idol of the masses —a fact due to the magnificent and successful battle he has recently waged against the ringsters—and is recognized by all as one wholly deserving of confidence, by reason of his superior judgment in sizing up public affairs, his steadfastness of purpose, and his conceded ability to battle in the line of his convictions.

THE poor Populist party has a hard time of it. The last to give it a down ward kick was Senator Tillman, of South Carolina. When any party will send such a ranting demagogue to the United States Senate as the Populist party did in the new South Carolina Senator, they are doing their cause irreparable injury. His speech from beginning to end was unparliamentary, and filled with inuendos and tirades against everyone who did not agree with him. Until the Populist party gets sense enough to send men of brains and some courtesy to represent them in the halls of Congress, instead of fire eaters like Tillman, they must expect to remain in the minority and see their cause losing ground continually.

AS THE Pennsylvania legislature is not in session to call a halt on Senator Cameron's free silver antics in Congress, it becomes the duty of the press to voice the sentiment of the people of the Keystone State and let the Senator thoroughly understand that he is not carrying out the wishes of his constituents,

ROBERT PATTISON has been entered on the Democratic side for the presidential race. Now, where is Sibley? He should certainly be entered and each party would then have one of Pennsylvania's favorite sons as a prospective candidate for presidential honors.

THE name of Senator M. S. Quay, Pennsylvania's favorite son, will not be presented at the next Republican National convention, as a candidate for the presidency.

A SET OF ROGUES

BY FRANK BARRETT.

The icy barrier of resentment is melted by the first warm tear—this silent testimony of her smothered grief—and bursting from the bonds of reason he yields to the passionate impulse of his heart, and clasping this poor sorrowing wife to his breast he seeks to kiss away the tears from her cheek and soothe her with gentle words. She responds to his passion, kiss for kiss, as she clasps her hands about his head, but still her tears flow on, for with her readier wit she perceives that this is but the transport of passion on his side and not the unlaxed outcome of enduring love, proving again the truth of his unmeditated prophecy, for how can he stand who yields so quickly to the first assault, and if he cannot stand her can he raise her? Surely and more surely, little by little, they must sink together to some lower depth, and one day, thinks she, repeating his words, "we may chat easily upon this villainy and regret we went no further in it."

Mr. Godwin leads her to the adjoining chamber, which had been his, and says:

"Lie down, love. Tomorrow we shall see things clearer and think more reasonably."

"Yes," says she in return, "more reasonably," and with that she does his bidding, and he returns to sit before the embers and meditate, and here he sits, striving in vain to bring the tumult of his thoughts to some coherent shape, until, from sheer exhaustion, he falls in a kind of lethargy of sleep.

Meanwhile Moll, lying in the dark, had been thinking also, but, as women will at such times, with clearer perception, so that her ideas, forming in logical sequence and growing more clear and decisive, as an argument becomes more lively and conclusive by successful reasoning, served to stimulate her intellect and excite her activity. And the end of it was that she rose quickly from her bed and looked into the next room, where she saw her husband sitting, with his chin upon his breast and his hands folded upon his knee before the dead fire. Then, wrapping his cloak about her, she steals toward the outer door, but passing him she must needs pause at his back to stanch her tears a moment and look down upon him for the last time. The light shines in his brown hair, and, she bending down till her lips touch a stray curl, they part silently, and she, with yearning affection, bids him from her very soul a mute "Fare thee well, dear love!"

But she will wait no longer, fearing her courage may give way, and the next minute she is out in the night, softly drawing the door to that separates these two forever.

* * * * * *

For some time we spoke never a word, Dawson and I, he with his head lying on his arm, I seated in a chair with my hands hanging down by my side, quite stunned by the blow that had fallen upon us. At length, raising his head, his eyes puffed and his face bedaubed with tears, he says:

"Han't you a word of comfort, Kit, for a broken hearted man?"

I stammered a few words that had more sound than sense, but indeed I needed consolation myself, seeing my own responsibility for bringing this misfortune upon Moll, and being more heartily ashamed of my roguery now 'twas discovered.

"You don't think he'll be too hard on poor Moll, tell me that, Kit?"

"Aye, he'll forgive her," says I, "sooner than us, or we ourselves."

"And you don't think he'll be forever a-casting it in her teeth that her father's a—a drunken vagabond, eh?"

"Nay. I believe he is too good a man for that."

"Then," says he, standing up, "I'll go and tell him the whole story, and you shall come with me to bear me out."

"Tomorrow will be time enough," says I, flinching from this office. "'Tis late now."

"No matter for that. Time enough to sleep when we've settled this business. We'll not leave poor Moll to bear all the punishment of our getting. Mr. Godwin shall know what an innocent, simple child she was when we pushed her into this knavery, and how we dared not tell her of our purpose lest she should draw back. He shall know how she was ever an obedient, docile, artless girl, yielding always to my guidance, and you can stretch a point, Kit, to say you have ever known me for a headstrong, masterful sort of a fellow, who would take denial from none, but must have my own way in all things. I'll take all the blame on my own shoulders, as I should have done at first, but I was so staggered by this fall."'

"Well," says I, "if you will have it so"—

"I will," says he stoutly. "And now give me a bucket of water that I may souse my head and wear a brave look. I would have him think the worst of me that he may feel the kinder to poor Moll. And I'll make what atonement I can," adds he as I led him into my bedchamber. "If he desire it, I will promise never to see Moll again. Nay, I will offer to take the king's bounty and go a-sailoring, and so, betwixt sickness and the Dutch, there'll be an end of Jack Dawson in a very short space."

When he had ducked his head in a bowl of water and got our cloaks from the room below, we went to the door, and there, to my dismay, I found the lock fast and the key which I had left in its socket gone.

"What's amiss, Kit?" asks Dawson, perceiving my consternation.

"The key, the key!" says I, holding the candle here and there to seek it on the floor, then giving up my search as it struck me that Mr. Godwin and Moll could not have left the house had the door been locked on the inside. "I do believe we are locked in and made prisoners."

"Why, sure, this is not Mr. Godwin's doing!" cries he.

"'Tis Simon," says I, with conviction, seeing him again in my mind, standing behind Mr. Godwin, with wicked triumph in his face.

"Is there no other door but this one?" asks Dawson.

"There is one at the back, but I have never yet opened that for lack of a key." And now setting one thing against another and recalling how I had before found the door open, when I felt sure I had locked it fast, the truth appeared to me—namely, that Simon had that key and did get in the back way, going out by the front on that former occasion in haste upon some sudden alarm.

"Is there never a window we can slip through?" asks Jack.

"Only those above stairs. The lower are all barred."

"A fig for his bars. Does he think we have neither hands nor wits to be hindered by this silly woman's trick?"

"'Tis no silly trick. He's not the man to do an idle thing. There's mischief in this."

"What mischief can he do us more than he has done, for I see his hand in our misfortune? What mischief, I say? Out with it, man, for your looks betray a fear of something worse."

"Faith, Jack, I dread he has gone to fetch help and will lodge us in jail for this business."

"Jail!" cries he in a passion of desperation. "Why, this will undo Moll forever. Her husband can never forgive her putting such shame upon him. Rouse yourself, man, from your stupor. Get me something in the shape of a hammer, for God's sake, that we may burst our way from this accursed trap."

I bethought me of an ax for splitting wood that lay in the kitchen, and fetching it quickly I put it in his hand. Bidding me stand aside, he let fly at the door like a madman. The splinter flew, but the door held good, and when he staid a moment to take a new grip on his ax I heard a clamor of voices outside—Simon's, higher than the rest, crying, "My new door, that cost me seven and eightpence!"

"The lock, the lock!" says I. "Strike that off."

Down came the ax, striking a spark of fire from the lock, which fell with a clatter at the next blow, but ere we had time to open the door Simon and his party, entering by the back door, forced us to turn for our defense. Perceiving Dawson armed with an ax, however, these fellows paused, and the leader, whom I recognized for the constable of our parish, carrying a staff in one hand and a lanthorn in t'other, cried to us in the king's name to surrender ourselves.

"Take us if you can," cries Dawson, "and the Lord have mercy on the first who comes within my reach!"

Deftly enough old Simon, snatching the fellow's cap who stood next him, flings it at the candle that stands flaring on the floor and jostles the constable's lanthorn from his hand, so that in a moment we were all in darkness. Taking us at this disadvantage, for Dawson dare not lay about him with his ax, for fear of hitting me by misadventure, the rascals closed at once, and a most bloody, desperate fight ensued.

For, after the first onslaught, in which Dawson, dropping his ax, as being useless at such close quarters, and I grappled each our man, the rest, knowing not friend from foe in the obscurity and urged on by fear, fell upon each other, this one striking out at the first he met, and that giving us good as he had taken, and so all fell a-mauling and belaboring with such lust of vengeance that presently the whole place was of an uproar with the din of cursing, howling and hard blows. For my own lot I had old Simon to deal with, as I knew at once by the cold, greasy feel of his leathern jerkin, he being enraged to make me his prisoner for the ill I had done him. Hooking his horny fingers about my throat, he clung to me like any wildcat, but stumbling shortly over two who were rolling on the floor we went down both with a crack, and with such violence that he, being undermost, was stunned by the fall. Then, my blood boiling at this treatment, I got astride of him and roasted his ribs royally, and with more force than ever I had conceived myself to be possessed of, and growing beside myself with this passion of war I do think I should have pounded him into a pulp but that two other combatants, falling across me with their whole weight, knocked all the wind out of my body, oppressing me so grievously that 'twas as much as I could do to draw myself out of the fury and get a gasp of breath again.

About this time the uproar began to subside, for those who had got the worst of the battle thought it advisable to sneak out of the house for safety, and those who had fared better, fearing a reverse of fortune, counted they had done enough for this bout, and so also withdrew.

"Are you living, Kit?" asks Dawson then.

"Aye," says I as valiantly as you please, "and ready to fight another half [illegible]," but pulling th[illegible] broken door open, all the same, to get out the easier in case they returned.

"Why, then, let's go," says he, "unless any is minded to have us stay."

No one responding to this challenge, we made ado to find a couple of hats and cloaks for our use and sallied out.

"Which way do we turn?" asks Dawson as we come into the road.

"Whither would you go, Jack?"

"Why, to warn Moll of her danger, to be sure."

I apprehended no danger to her and believed her husband would defend her in any case better than we could, but Dawson would have it we should warn them, and so we turned toward the court. And now upon examination we found we had come very well out of this fight, for save that the wound in Dawson's hand had been opened afresh we were neither much the worse.

"But let us set our best foot foremost, Jack," says I, "for I do think we have done more mischief tonight than any we have before, and I shall not be greatly surprised if we are called to account for the death of old Simon or some of his hirelings."

"I know not how that may be," says he, "but I must answer for knocking of somebody's teeth out."

SHE OUTTALKED DUMAS.

How a Clever Irish Girl Got Ahead of the Academician.

Dumas fils had curt manners. He was shy. Like most shy people, he vanquished this defect by going into the other extreme. He softened as he grew old and took a relative polish at the meetings of the academy. The tongue was always shrewd; it could be cruel. The code of social amenities was at the time I speak of a sealed book to him. I recollect a tilt between him and an Irish girl, brought up in Paris, who sat opposite to him at dinner. She was singularly plain. But her ugliness was most amusing, and she was a witty, good tempered being. The nose was short, funny, retrousse, the mouth wide and laughing and the tongue lisping, but, as the French say, bien pendue for repartee.

Dumas, after staring some time at her, put his forefinger to the tip of his semiaquiline nose and pushed it up. He kept it so for some time, still staring. The pantomime was grossly impertinent. I thought—and so did every one else—that the poor girl would burst into tears. She laughed, not a bit hysterically, and, feeling she was an object of general attention and of sympathy, made a funny remark on the grimace that M. Dumas was pleased to give himself. He began to rally her. She flung back retorts. I never heard such a mimic war of words before or since. It ended in a splendid victory, through good humor and wit, on the young lady's side. She spoke French to perfection. "M. Alphonse" was then on the stage. Mr. Ernest Pinard, who listened with rapture, cried, "Mademoiselle enfonce votre Alphonsine!" Alphonsine was the comic actress in that play.

Dumas retired from the combat nettled, but he did not long bear malice. He afterward said what a pity it was that la jeune Irlandaise etait dans le monde. She had the vis comica in a greater degree than any actress or actor he had ever seen, and proved that where l'ame est bien faite there cannot be ugliness.—Paris Letter in London Truth.

Schiaparelli.

Schiaparelli, the astronomer who first discovered the so called "canals" of Mars, did so with a much smaller telescope than those in use in many other observatories at that time. And yet he is a very nearsighted man. Garrett P. Serviss of Brooklyn, in speaking of his first interview with the eminent Italian, said that Schiaparelli would hold a visitor's card within five or six inches of his eyes in order to decipher it. The singular part of this story is not that a man with such an infirmity should be able to outdo other astronomers, for keenness of vision depends rather upon the retina than the convexity of the lenses of the eye, and the eyepiece of a telescope can be focussed so as to suit the latter. But it does seem a little odd that the gifted scientist in question should habitually refrain from wearing eyeglasses. Possibly he has a theory as to the effect of their use upon his visual powers.

The Way to Eat Candy.

I think much of the outcry against candy is the result of wrong methods of use. It can often be safely taken at meal time with good results. Scientists say that the food value of sugar is very great. A pound of sugar contains much more energy and power to support animal life than a pound of meat. If candy is taken under such conditions that it will not derange the digestive apparatus, it is perfectly wise and rational to be a candy eater.—Annals of Hygiene.

"Is D'Auber a good painter?"

"Yes; good as gold."

"Do his paintings sell?"

"Yes—those who buy them."—Detroit Free Press.

WORSE THAN WAS REPORTED.

Evidence That Eight or Nine Persons Were on the Florida.

NEWBURYPORT, Mass., Feb. 11.—From a letter washed ashore at Salisbury Beach, it appears that there was an eighth member of the crew of the wrecked schooner Florida. This letter bore the address of John S. Nellson, 59 Green street, New York, and it is believed the one to whom it was written is among those lost.

Portions of a woman's apparel and the photograph of a woman have also been cast up by the waves and it is thought possible that these indicate the presence of the captain's wife on board the wrecked vessel, but there is a general hope that this may not prove to be a fact.

The wreck of the schooner Alliance off Plum island is fast going to pieces.

Besides the bodies of Captain Melanson and John Reed none have come ashore from this wreck.

Learning a Foreign Language.

Some interesting statistics might be collected on the effect upon linguistic power and accent of the possession of a musical ear. It would seem that a person with a good ear for music would be more rapid in the acquirement of a foreign tongue, and having acquired it would possess a more perfect pronunciation of the sounds than would a person not having the same ready musical gift.

Similarly such a person would be quick to attain the dialect of the country in which he might be living and to adapt his speech to the brogue or provincialism with which he found his ears surrounded.

The greater rapidity with which Germans, Poles and Russians learn the English language is surely not to be accounted for merely by stating that their own more nearly resembles our language than does that of the French or Italian. A Greek, for instance, learns English in about half the time it takes an Italian to acquire French, and a Russian will speak French, English and German in the same period that a Frenchman will acquire a mere smattering of the two latter.—Pearson's Weekly.

Fatal Result of a Prizefight.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 11.—As the result of a prizefight in this city on Saturday night, Frederick Schlechter, aged 40 years, one of the principals, is dead, and ex-Policeman Henry Pluckfeldor, aged 36 years, the other principal, is in jail charged with Schlechter's murder. Ever since the recent election there has been a coolness between the two men, caused, it is said, by the factional political fight between the followers of the Durham wing of the Republican party and that led by David Martin. It grew so bitter that Pluckfelder challenged Schlechter to fight. The latter accepted and the battle took place in Schlechter's mattress factory on St. John street.

CURIOUS LEGENDS OF THE FAR NORTHWESTERN TRIBES.

Several Traditions Which Refer to the Sun—The Raven, the Mink and the Salmon In Legends of British Columbian Tribes of Aborigines.

Among the northern coast tribes of British Columbia the raven plays an important part. He is the benefactor of man and by some tribes is considered the deity himself. One of his adventures was stealing the sun from the chief who kept it from man in a little box, together with the moon and daylight. In one tribe he created salmon. Another legend makes him the grandson of the deity, his father having left earth for a visit to heaven and there married the chief's daughter.

Another series of traditions refers to the sun, and in a class of these the mink is considered the son of the sun. These legends are told by the Bliqula and Khvakuetl tribes of British Columbia. In this story you will notice the remarkable resemblance to the Greek Phaethon. Once upon a time the mink played grace hoops with the ducks, and the mink won. Then they shot arrows at a stick, and the mink proved the best marksman. Then all the ducks abused him and maltreated him and finally broke his bow and said. "We do not care to play any longer with you. You do not even know where your father is." Stung by this taunt, mink hastened to his mother. She told him his father was in the sky; it was he who carried the sun every day. Mink determined to visit him, and with his new bow shot an arrow into the sky. The arrow struck in the sky, a second arrow hit the notch of the first, and finally a chain was formed reaching from the sky to the earth. Up this ladder mink climbed and arrived at his father's abode. His father was glad to see him and permitted him to carry the sun in his stead for one day. He must ascend slowly behind the mountains and not go fast lest the earth should burn. Equipping himself with his father's blanket and nose ornament, mink set out.

All went well till just before noon. Mink became impatient at his slow progress, began to run, and to kick aside the clouds which obstructed his path He set fire to earth, and men, in order to escape the fearful flames, jumped into the ocean Part of them were transformed into animals, part into real men (they had been half man and half animals before). Poor mink was thrown from heaven into the sea below, but was rescued and carried home

The legend of the visit to heaven occurs in many of the tribes, but with other animals than the mink. Many stories told of the raven are also told of mink. He, too, obtained fire for his tribe, obtaining it from the ghosts who had it in their possession. Mink stole the infant child of the chief of the ghosts and would not give it up till the firebrand was given him.

Farther south, along the coast, the sun becomes a more important mythological figure. It is said the Salish of the interior burn food, blankets and other property as an offering to the sun. Some of the important legends refer to the murder of the sun, and to the origin of the new sun and moon. From the language and from the legends it appears that many of the coast tribes considered the moon and sun as the same person, or at least as two brothers. One story runs: "A long time ago there was a man named Momhanate, who was blind. As he was unable to endure the heat of the sun, he went fishing during the night. When the day began to dawn, his wife would go down to the beach and call him home before the sun rose. One day, however, his wife slept too long, and it was already daylight when she awoke. She called to her husband to return as quickly as possible, but before he reached the shore he had melted. Then the sons determined to avenge their father's death. They made a chain of arrows and climbed up. They killed the sun with their arrows, and then thought, 'What shall we do next?' The older one said, 'Let us be the sun,' and he asked the brother where he wanted to go. The latter answered, 'I will go to the night; you go to the day.' And so they did. The younger brother became the moon, the elder the sun."

As the salmon is the great staple of subsistence from the Sacramento river northward, so with it are connected the greatest number of superstitions. Messrs. Lewis and Clark, mentioning the capture of the first salmon at The Dalles in 1807, an occasion of great rejoicing, state that in order to hasten their arrival the Indians, according to custom, dressed the fish and cut it into small pieces, one of which was given to each child in the village. At the mouth of the Columbia the first salmon could be eaten only by the medicine men. The taking of the first fish of the season was everywhere the occasion of a feast. The salmon dance was performed, and the anticipations of plenty lightened every heart. The earlier fish could not be obtained at any price by a white man unless it were first cooked, lest he should open it with a knife instead of a stone or cut it crosswise. The heart was always roasted and eaten lest a dog should eat it and no more salmon would be taken. On the ripening of the salmon berry these rules are abated, the coming of the schools by that time being rendered certain. These superstitions have in most of the tribes nearly died away, the feasts have been discontinued and the salmon dance neglected.—Portland Oregonian.

An Infallible Test.

A miser had died very suddenly. The doctor who was called in to certify his death appeared to have his doubts about the case.

"Place a 10 mark piece in his hand," said the old housekeeper of the deceased. "If he doesn't grasp it, you may safely make out the order for his burial."

Many cases of so called heart disease, are only cases of acid fermentation in the stomach. The irritation from the acid hinders the action of the heart, through the pneumogastric nerve, and very often the excessive restraining power of this peculiarly acting nerve, becomes a very serious matter; the heart makes the greatest effort to do its work, but there is a shortness of breath which cannot be made up for, and the feeling throughout the chest is very distressing. Sometimes this acid arises and causes an acrid smarting in the throat; at other times the burning is up and down the chest.

Another stomach trouble is that form of dyspepsia which gives pain after eating. Persons with this disease seem to have but a scant measure of nerve strength; when food is being digested, the stomach needs the concentration of all of the nerve and brain force, and if reading or close thought is attempted soon after eating, the stomach commences that intolerable aching which dyspeptics dread so much, when, the only immediate relief appears to be to stop the mental activity and get up and move around In such cases there is evidently for the time being, too little nerve power to divide between the stomach and the brain; each one alone needs it all to enable it to perform its labor.

There are two properties possessed by Dr. Day's Stomach and Nerve Tonic, which constitute it a cure for all of the above derangements. One, is its power of purifying and sweetening the stomach and stopping the formation of gas and acid, the other is the giving of increased nerve action and strength. Soon, with better digestion and better nutrition, there is a general renewal of life and health The mind of a business man, under its use, soon become clearer and more active, thoughts come easier and are more clearly expressed, the memory is stronger, business plans and ventures are arranged in a better manner and are more patiently and successfully carried out, and details are attended to better because of the increas strength of both mind and muscle.

Women having the care of a household on their minds, find Dr. Day's Stomach and Nerve Tonic to be a great blessing; it gives better digestion, better nutrition, more strength, cures that feeling of weariness in the morning, that anxiety of mind, that fear that something is going wrong or that something bad is going to happen, cures dizziness, shortness of breath pressure through the chest, belching of wind, rumbling in the bowels heartburn, and all forms of dyspepsia that come from weakness.

Mrs. Eben Pierce, of Borie, Potter Co., Pa, writes: "I can truthfully say that I owe my life to your stomach and nerve tonic; I was troubled with my stomach for over a year and tried everything I could hear of, but did not get any benefit. I was nearly in deepair, for although I had only four in my family, I could not begin to do the work for them; an anxious friend wrote me to try Dr. Day's Stomach and Nerve Tonic, and I did; I did not expect to ever get any better, but was greatly relieved on taking the first dose and now after taking only one bottle of your remedy I can do my work and my stomach does not hurt me only when I do very heavy work, I shall continue its use until I am entirely cured, for I am perfectly satisfied that it will cure all such stomach trouble. I thank you dear Doctor, a thousand times over, for putting before the public such a wonderful remedy for human suffering."

Mrs. Albert Harman, of 2305 Fifth Ave., Altoona, Pa., writes, "Dr. Day's Stomach and Nerve Tonic has done me a power of good; that burning after meals has left me; I have always been so nervous that I would take nervous spells so bad sometimes that I would have to send for the doctor, but have not had one since I commenced using your stomach and nerve tonic."

H. C. Beatty, Barkeyville, Pa, says: "For years I had a severe pain in my stomach after meals; one bottle of Dr. Day's Stomach and Nerve Tonic cured me; I think, permanently."

J. C. Fulton, of Burgettstown, Pa., writes, "I have been afflicted with the rheumatism and was laid up in bed a good part of the time; my stomach was in a bad condition and would not retain food. I began to use Dr. Day's Stomach and Nerve Tonic it not only helped my stomach but relieved me of the rheumatism and also increased my weight wonderfully."

girl with her aged father. They were very poor, and as their little "Mountain Home" was soon to be sold under a mortgage, it was with joy that the old father welcomed as a suitor for his daughter's hand an old and wealthy friend of his youth, who, having come to pay him a visit, had fallen in love with the charming girl. She, having lived so long in poverty, was quite carried away by the tales told her by the rich old friend regarding the wealth and splendor of his city home, and he offered her land, gold and diamonds if she would become his bride. She had a dark-eyed mountain lover, who was too poor to offer her anything but roses.

WHICH DID SHE CHOOSE?

The question is answered in the (3) verse song and chorus entitled:

"DIAMONDS OR ROSES,"

Words and Music by C. H. ADDISON.

This is one of the most catchy, brilliant and fascinating songs ever published, and is now being sung with great success in all the large cities. Price 40 cents.

LITERARY NOTES.

In 1834 Eugene Field wrote a story which he called "The Werewolf" When it was finished he laid it aside and a year afterward entirely rewrote it In 1886 he again took it up and revised it, and during the nine years between that time and his death in November last, he rewrote it eight times. His last revision pleased him and he decided to print it. But death came too suddenly, and the story was found, unpublished, among his effects. Mrs. Field, concluding to have the story appear, gave it to the editor of "The Ladies' Home Journal," in which magazine all of Mr. Field's work, outside of his newspaper articles, was presented to the public. The story will be printed in the next issue of the "Journal," strikingly illustrated by Mr. Howard Pyle.

For upwards of two years the publishers of "McClure's Magazine" have been quietly gathering material and pictures for a new life of General Grant. They believe they have made a larger collection of portraits of Grant (many of them rare) and other pictures relating to his life, than has ever been made before. This biography will bring out the real Grant in the same vivid, thorough, and interesting manner as Lincoln is presented in the "Life" now running in "McClure's." They have been fortunate in securing the co-operation of Col. F. D Grant, who has most of his father's papers.

EAST SMETHPORT.

I note by your last issue that none of the school directors were present at the flag presentation of the 1st inst. and you accuse them of being rather timid You must remember that people of this place are not interested in anything that is going on here. Would you call the teachers of this place modest or bashful because neither of them attended the local institute held here some time since? Both the president and secretary were there.

The wholesale advertisement of the old bachelors continue in your locals and I think it time a halt should be called. I suppose the reason that none of the old boys have made a protest is because they are too reserved, but here I venture to speak for us. All of us are not to blame altogether for being old bachelors. Before the year is past perhaps some of the gentler sex will be as reserved as we are; if they should meet with that thundering "No" as often as some of us have. You know the spirit will not always strive with man, but there is no danger of our sisters becoming so dejected as we have, for many of us will jump at the first proposal. Miles Standish, the brave captain of Plymouth, said: "I'm not afraid of bullets, nor the shot from the mouth of a cannon, but the thundering "No!" point blank from the mouth of a woman." That I confess I'm afraid of, nor am I ashamed to confess it. Now let the dear maid in distress speak or send her name to the editor, and without doubt your hiding place will be sought and found.

Poisoning by Stale Eggs.

Dr. Cameron has reported the occurrence of vomiting and purging in seventy-four nuns and girl pupils in the boarding school attached to the convent in Limerick, following a dinner at which mutton and a custard, composed of eggs, milk corn flour, and sugar were eaten. The corn flour was suspected to contain arsenic, but analysis showed it to be free from poison of any kind, and to be of good quality. The sugar also proved to be pure. No other constituents of the meal could be obtained The vomit and the stools were intensely green from the presence of billary matter, but careful analysis failed to disclose the presence of ordinary poison. The viscera of two patients who had succumbed were also examined, but no poison was found. Ptomaines were found present, but in small quantity. The milk used had been boiled, and the meat was above suspicion. The eggs, however, were not fresh, and one presented a reddish-brown color and was thought to be bad. Some of the custard given to pigs induced severe diarrhœa.—Dublin Medical Journal.

And the Parrot Reformed.

James J. Brown, of Williamsburgh got a green parrot a few years ago which had a reputation for profanity. He took it to his home and tried to make a better bird of it. His house is close to the Catholic church of St. Vincent de Paul, of which Rev. Martin Carroll is the pastor. Mr. Brown, after awhile, succeeded in reforming the morals of the bird. In good weather its cage was hung out of a back window, where it had every opportunity of studying the masses said in the church. Last summer the parrot began to annoy the priest and his associates by imitating the chanting of the mass. It learned to utter several Latin phrases and recently worshippers noticed it. Mr. Brown was requested by some of the church people to get rid of the bird. He refused to do this, but instead of hanging the cage outside the back window, as had been the custom, he kept the bird in his house. He said he was not aware that the parrot had mastered the Latin tongue but was pleased with the thoroughness of its reformation.
